Company

Monsarrat is a Los Angeles startup making the world's first outdoor roleplaying video game (Outdoor RPG).

So far outdoor video games like Pokémon Go have been scavenger hunt games. You collect stuff by walking to GPS points. But nobody plays collecting games on PC and console. The most popular and best-earning genres are action, roleplaying, strategy and more. That's what Monsarrat does. They take the best performing video games genres from PC and console, and bring them outside.

Instead of GPS points, Monsarrat lays out a game landscape across a real world outdoor space, which you walk through to explore. On your phone, in augmented reality, you see dozens or hundreds of fantasy trees, rocks, creatures, buildings and other game content, forming a roleplaying game world..

It's a completely new, never seen before category of video game, based on 6 patents. Their founder, Johnny Monsarrat, previously co-created a new category of video game, Massively Multiplayer Online games (MMOs), an industry that now earns $24 billion a year.

Product

Monsarrat has launched a free demo game, Landing Party, now available on Apple App Store and Google Play.

The game:

- Brings deep storytelling to outdoor video games for the first time,
- Builds mental and physical health,
- Lets you play anywhere, and
- Features roleplaying, a game genre that retains players longer and monetize them better.

Monsarrat is now fundraising to build out a full game.
